

Hedon Haven

The Haven was originally a natural waterway which became a thriving port as far back as the 12th century. As seagoing ships became larger the need for a larger port became urgent and the port of Wyke (which eventually became Hull) gradually overtook the Haven as the premier port in the Humber estuary.